BOY SCOUTS WILL GO INTO CAMP JULY 22

The next interesting event in the Boy Scouts' calendar is close at hand. On July 22 they will go into camp, there to remain through July 29. One of the most important matters was to select a camp master, and he has been found in H. C. Gordon, Manager of the Michigan State Telephone company in Ypsilanti. His vacation is due about that time and he proposes to devote one week of it to conducting the Scout camp.

This is to be a "camp of instruction" and is to be located somewhere along the Huron River within easy reach of Ypsilanti. There is a most interesting reason why it should be quite near Ypsilanti—this is because Ernest Thompson Seton is to be the guest of the Scouts—himself the most distinguished of all Scouts. In Scout circles Mr. Seton is known as "Black Wolf," but not to many Scouts will come the pleasure and distinction of entertaining in camp this Chief Scout.

Mr. Seton will come into town twice each day to deliver lectures at the Normal summer school at four and eight o'clock. Now one of these lectures is to be delivered especially to Boy Scouts and on that occasion the camp of instruction is to be deserted and all will come up in a body to hear the wonderful things that Black Wolf will tell. It has been decided to invite to this lecture all the Boy Scouts of this territory, as such a chance may not come to the Scouts around here very soon again.

The Scouts are bidden to watch the paper the early part of next week for detailed instructions. A number of the boys are out of town visiting and others are working, but they will all have ample time to arrange with their employers to get off and to return home from their visits. All boys are to be taken to this camp who have uniforms.

FOUR BOYS LOST IN LAKE

Forbidden to go Near Water, They Slip Away in Old Boat.

Black River, Mich., July 15.—During a high wind four boys were carried out on Lake Huron in an old boat and were lost. There were Joseph Marquis' sons, aged nine, seven and five years. The other boy was the seven-year-old son of John Lalonde.

The children had been forbidden by their parents to go near the water, but slipped away. A life-saving crew searched for their boat in vain. Mrs. Lalonde's life is despaired of in consequence of the tragedy.

Chesaning, Mich., July 15.—Because Alec Smeaton and Newell Downing threatened to kill her dog, Mrs. Fred Smith, living on the outskirts of the village, is alleged to have shot three times at them with a revolver.

Owosso, Mich., July 15.—Robert White, janitor for an Owosso bank, has brought suit for divorce against his wife on original grounds. He says they have moved eight times in the eleven months they have been married. Mrs. White is now in Grand Rapids.

SENATORS AGREE ON VOTE DATEG

Reciprocity Bill Will Undoubtedly Pass July 22.

ADJOURNMENT BEFORE AUG. 15

Plans of Leaders Contemplated Earlier Dates, but Insurgents Stand Out for Longer Debate on Tariff.

Washington, July 15.—The senate reached an agreement by unanimous consent to vote on the Canadian reciprocity bill on Saturday, July 22. The bill will undoubtedly pass on that day without amendment.

On other important pending measures an agreement was reached for votes as follows: The Underwood wool bill, July 27; farmers' free list bill, Aug. 1; congressional reapportionment bill, Aug. 2; resolution for statehood for Arizona and New Mexico, Aug. 7.

This program contemplates that congress will adjourn some time between Aug. 8 and Aug. 15.

The plans of the senate leaders, both Democratic and Republican, contemplated earlier dates and looked to an adjournment of congress not later than Aug. 5, but the insurgents stood out for more time to debate the tariff question.

Senator Shively of Indiana, Democrat, is responsible for fixing a day for a vote on the reapportionment bill. He reported the bill from the committee on census. There is a strong Republican opposition to the measure. Senator LaFollette, chairman of the census committee, will submit a minority report. Senators Root and Burton intend to speak against the bill and lead the fight against it.

The arrangement for a vote on the statehood resolution was made at the demand of a number of senators, including insurgents. It is doubtful if an agreement could have been reached if the leaders had not been willing to concede a vote on the statehood resolution. No provision was made for a vote on the campaign publicity bill, but Senator Kenyon of Iowa stood out against the agreement for several hours, insisting that the publicity bill be included in the list of measures to be voted on. He finally yielded at the solicitation of some of his insurgent colleagues.

The new treaty goes into effect immediately and will remain in force for ten years.

M'NAMARA TRIAL OCT. 10

Date Is Set by Judge Bordwell of Los Angeles.

Defense Attorneys Argue for Dec. 1 and Prosecution for Aug. 1 as Trial Date.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 15.—Judge Bordwell set the trial of the McNamara brothers for Oct. 10.

The district attorney and counsel for the defense did not enter the proposed conference as to the time for the trial of the alleged dynamite plotters, but argued the question vigorously in court.

The district attorney maintained the trial should be begun by Aug. 1, saying delay would give witnesses he wished to subpoena an opportunity to leave the state.

Clarence S. Darrow and other counsel for the accused labor leader and his brother were equally opposed to having the trial set for any time before Dec. 1, asserting evidence they wished to produce required a long period for preparation.

ITALIAN WOMAN'S LIFE IS SPARED

Death Sentence Commuted to Life Imprisonment.

TOOK LIFE OF BRUTE HUSBAND

She Is Mother of Four Children and When He Sought to Force Her to Immoral Life She Killed Him.

Ottawa, Ont., July 15. — The Canadian cabinet commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of death passed upon the Italian woman, Angelino Neapolitano, who murdered her husband in Sault Ste. Marie.

The woman is to become a mother in a few days. When she was convicted of killing her husband, the department of justice of Canada debated executing her and thus taking the life of the unborn child.

It was finally decided to stay the execution until twelve days after birth of the baby, when it would be taken from its mother's breast and she sent to the gallows.

Instantly the women of New York, Chicago and Ottawa and other cities in both countries rose up to fight such an act. Petitions were circulated and protests filed.

The trial of the woman revealed that she and her four born children had been abused by the husband and father whose life she took. It showed that the man had endeavored to make her lead an immoral life, the wages of her sin to be taken by him, and that he had done this while he knew of the existence of the unborn child.

The mother, ignorant of the law, saw no other way to defend her honor. She took the only way she knew.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 15. — Although the late Charles Willard provided money whereby the Y. M. C. A. erected a three-story building in the local business district, the association has outgrown it during the past decade and now proposes to vacate the comparatively new structure for a more commodious and modern one.

It is planned to sell the present structure and site and use the proceeds as the nucleus for a building fund sufficient to erect a building entirely devoted to c. M. C. A. work. The present building has stores on the ground floor.

ILL FATED HORSE IS ATTACKED BY A VICIOUS BULL DOG

An accident which was almost as bad to hear as to see happened Friday evening about six o'clock in P. Lansky's barn, when a savage bull dog he owns atacked his horses. The dog is so fierce that he is customarily kept chained, but yesterday in some way he got loose and sprang toward the bay horse of the team which Mr. Lansky drives. The bay was so lucky as to shake him off, and then the bull dog made a leap for the white horse. He dug his teeth into the horse's chest and clung there with a vise-like grip, while the terrified animal kicked and snorted and circled around and round the barn trying to rid himself of the frightful pest. In his pain and fright he struck out and kicked Mr. Lansky twice. Finally, with the dog still fastened into his flesh, the horse made a plunge for the door and dashed out into the ward. Mr. Lansky had cried lustily for help, meanwhile trying with a pitch fork to reach the dog without wounding the raging horse. As he passed him going out of the door, he was able to strike at the day and a neighbor coming with a revolver just then, speedily killed the dog.

A veterinary was promptly called and attended to the horse's condition. Mr. Lansky's arm where he was kicked by the horse is quite comfortable this morning and the horse will recover from his frightful hurt. This is the same horse whose eye was put out in a runaway just before the Fourth of July.

OBJECT TO CITY WATER REGULATIONS

(Communication)

Editor Daily Press:

The Commissioners of Public Works have issued their annual edict in regard to the use of water. We are now allowed to use it from 5 to 8 a. m. and 5 to 7 p. m., provided we hold the hose in our hands. Any person possessing any knowledge of gardening knows that it is useless to sprinkle a lawn or flowers in the morning. In the evening we have from 5 to 7. Unfortunately I do not get home until 6:15 p. m. and by the time I have had my evening meal the time limit for using water has expired. It may be necessary to issue instructions regulating the use of water, but it seems to me that in deciding the hours the Board should take into consideration the fact that all men do not get through their day's work at 5 p. m.

The water question is an important one. A city cannot expect to grow unless it has an abundant supply of water. Every summer these same conditions confront us. What is being done to remedy them? When our bridges are considered unsafe we hire an expert Bridge Engineer to make an examination. Why not employ an expert Engineer to look into the water question, and if there is an abundance of water, lets have it

There is another problem that confronts us and it is closely connected with the water question. I refer to the dust nuisance. If you want to get a taste of this, go over Cross street bridge, and if a carriage or an automobile comes along you can't see from one side of the bridge to the other.

We all know how injurious this dust is to our health. We also know that it destroys our furniture, covers the exterior of our houses with dirt and makes walking very disagreeable. I believe the City Council are investigating the use of oil on the streets. If this is found too expensive, I would suggest that the city purchase a sprinkler for each ward and keep the streets sprinkled. Undoubtedly part of the water could be taken from the river, so it would not be a drain on the City system. When there is no dust, the employes could be kept busy on the streets. There is always lots of dirt on the crossings.

Let us wake up and do something.

GEORGE HOLMES.

RAIN BRINGS RELIEF TO THE FIRE FIGHTERS

Au Sable, Mich., July 15.—Forest fires were checked and stamped out in northern Michigan Friday afternoon by a drenching rain. Although not of great duration, it will probably result in the prevention of further loss at this time.

Millersburg, Onaway, Tower, Metz, Lachine Hall, Oscoda and Au Sable and the country around were visited by the welcome rain, and when it was over smoke had almost ceased to rise from the stricken territory.

The people of the devastated region received the rain with joy. Hymns were sung and prayers said. Men, women and children stood out in the open and let the drops soak them.

Crews of men are out in all directions wet, stamping out smoldering fires. Shoud these be allowed to burn a heavy wind would stir them into activity again.

In districts unvisited by the rain the fires remaining are small and carefully watched.

The first bit of reconstruction is under way at the mouth of the Au Sable where men from the government boat Admiral are rebuilding the lighthouse. Supplies of clothing reached Au Sable Friday and were received with satisfaction.

The new town on the ruins of Au Sable and Oscoda will likely be known as Au Sable. There were formerly three sets of government in the two towns, and they were constantly at war. There was the city of Au Sable, the village of Oscoda and the township of Au Sable, a part of which was right in the city of Au Sable. Constant quarrels occurred over taxes, etc. Prosecutor Black is arranging for a special meeting of the board of supervisors to take action on building a bridge across the Au Sable to replace those burned.

"WHAT IS SOCIALISM?"

(Concluded)

Mr. Kaufman introduces his next chapter entitled, "The Point of Departure" with this quotation from Adam Smith's "The Wealth of Nations:" Labor was the first price, the original purchase-money that was paid for all things."

The author continues his discussion as follows: "Though the voters of America are about to be called upon to make the acquaintance of Socialism as a political movement, Socialism in its essense is really an economic movement expressing itself politically. But to come to a thorough understanding of this political issue which, supported by figures, two such differing seers as Herbert Spencer and Mark Hanna agreed must shortly confront mankind, it is obviously compulsory that we first understand the issue's economic essentials; and frankly, the way to the acquittal of this task should be no more beset by terrifying technical titles than was the way, in the previous chapter, to an explanation of the terms 'Class Struggle' and 'Social Revolution'—should be, in fact, uninteresting only if you have no interest in your rent, your butcher's bill, or the price that you pay for the clothes on your back.

"In the briefest summary compatible with clarity, these economic essentials are five in number: (1) Capital, (2) Use-Value, (3) Exchange-Value, (4) Labor, (5) Profit.

"Capital, according to the political economists of Capitalism as opposed to those of Socialism, is the ownership of useful things, or at all events of the capabilities for use that are inherent in those things. In his primitive state, man lived by the hunt. What he wanted for food he slew with the rude bow and arrow that he himself had made; what he needed to wear he secured from the skins of the animals he had thus slain, and what he received by way of shelter he tore from the trees or gathered from the rocks that filled his hunting-ground. For his existence in this condition, the implements of the hunt were therefore the sole necessities, were about the only useful manufactured articles, and ownership of these articles constituted the first Capital.

"As society became more complex as trade developed and as manufacture grew, although the relations of mankind waxed infinitely more varied, Capital, though it changed in degree, did not, according to the Capitalistic economists, change in kind, has not changed, nor can ever change, its nature. The owner may be an individual or a corporation, may possess only enough to supply a small portion of mankind, or produce or control enough for all the world, may command or make the finished product—the effect is the same: what is his is only the primitive man's bow and arrows in a more highly developed form; is Use-Value; is Capital.

"To this the Socialist gives small assent. It may be partially true, he says, that, in primitive times, Capital was the ownership of Use-Value, but that truth, he maintains, passed with the pasage of the primitive, and this for the reason that, under society as at present constituted—i. e., under Capitalism—the vast majority of men cannot produce all that they need—because they need more than a bow and arrows—and cannot use all that they produce—because the vast majority are not producting articles of immediate or inherent and direct usefulness to themselves.

"Karl Marx, the father of Socialism, in his great work, "Das Capital,' the Bible of that faith, begins by explaining that, under Capitalism, a commodity is the unit of wealth, and a commodity, he declares, must possess the ability to satisfy some human need or desire so general as to make the article so called exchangeable for other articles possessing a similar ability to satisfy a similar need. Capital, therefore, say the Marxians, is not the ownership of Use-Values—cattle, cloth, lumber—or of gold, bonds, or money of themselves; it is not even the ownership of a machine for the manufacture of Use-Values: 'A certain machine, for example, is a machine for spinning cotton; it is only under certain defined conditions that it becomes Capital; apart from these conditions it is no more capital than gold per se in money.'

"Since then the majority of individuals are engaged in producing what they themselves cannot directly use and since they cannot produce what they directly need; since, in short they are, on the contrary, producing something that is to be sold for a profit—producing, that is to say wealth in the shape of a commodity—it becomes evident, say the Socialists that their produce must indeed be exchangeable or saleable, must have a Social-Use-Value. Thus the owner of a rolling-mill may not himself use the rails which his mill produces; but he can sell those rails at a profit and invest the gain in a laundry-machine factory the product of which he may, again, not use, but can sell at a profit.

"Capital, then, according to the Socialist, is not the ownership of Use-Values, but is wealth reserved for the making of more wealth that is to be bartered for profit.

"Use-Values, the capabilities for use inherent in certain things, are of two kinds: (a) Those which meet the necessities of man; (b) Those which satisfy his desires.

"Socialists claim that it is only true that the degree of need determines the degree of worth, and his reasons for this declaration he lays down in his definition of Exchange-Value, or the value that an article has on the market, a value, as it will be seen, he maintains, that may be purely artificial, and is itself, as even the Capitalistic economists grant, dependent upon a factor still to be considered.

"The growth of human needs and desires and the spread of human industry have made—indeed, long ago made—direct exchange or barter impossible as a general rule for the conduct of trade. It became necessary to invent some medium, some measure or go-betweeen, a sort of counter or measure—more or less imperfect—we call Money.

"Thus today trade is the exchange of commodities by means of money. It is then necessary, according to the Socialist, to remember, what many authors forget, that Price and Value are two distinct economic entities.

"Price is a creation of our modern economic system. When mankind lived under another system, and one article was directly exchanged for another, there was, of course, such a thing as Value, but there was no such thing as Price. Now, however, direct exchange and barter having almost completely disappeared—having become under the modern regime practically impossible—we must, as we have just seen, exchange through a medium. That is why in the terms of money we now measure the values of commodities for exchange. Price, declares the Socialist, is not Value, but the measure of Value. Value, he admits, fluctuates, but not so much as money itself, and Price, he concludes, may be arbitrarily modified by monopolies and 'corners' until it is not even a true measure.

"In treating of the influence of Labor upon Price, or Exchnge-Value, the Capitalistic economists agree, for the most part, that this influence is exerted in the matter of quantity—the quantity of labor involved in the production of the article. Our Primitive Man, you will remember, traded not one bow for one arrow, but one bow for as many arrows as were made in the time that it took to make the bow, time being the measure of the quantity of labor. The Capitalistic economists modify the broad rule and say that the Exchange-Value of an article is effected by the average quantity of labor necessary for its production. Labor is thus the force that fixes the law of exchange.

"Labor, according to the Socialists, is qualitative as well as quantitative. We must take into account, he insists, not only the time which a skilled worker expends in the making of a given article, but also the time which he has previously spent in the perfect learning of his trade, for that time, when to a regular practice of that trade, may well make one day of labor by him equal to two days' labor upon a similar article by an untrained workman. In other words, says the Marxian, we must reckon the Social-Labor involved; the labor best suited to the satisfaction of the social or general demand for the creation of the article in question; or, to put it in still another shape: the Social-Labor-Value is the ruling amount of time and labor obtaining at that period of history for the production of the best commercial type of a specific article.

"The real law of values," says Mr. Spargo," is that the value of commodities is determined by the amount of abstract labor embodied in them, or by the amount of social human labor necessary, on the average, for their production. The exchange value of commodities is determined by the amount of average labor at the time socially necessary for the production, not absolutely in individual cases, but approximately in general by the bargaining and higgling of the market.

"This is the final parting of the ways between the two schools. Hitherto their paths have been sometimes the same, sometimes more or less parallel, and always departed merely to return. But now they part never to meet again, and that parting is made by the Socialist's development of his theory of Labor.

"For Labor, in the dictionary of Socialism, is a commodity. Just as money, the modern medium or measure of exchange for two given commodities, is itself a commodity, so also is this Labor which, the Marxian insists, is the fundamental determining power of value.

"Labor as labor has no value. One may spend his days in building an industry, building a factory and secures men to operate the machines in that factory; but what he secures, or hires, or buys, is not Labor in the abstract, but the power and will to labor, whether by time, so paid, or by piece-work, the result of which latter contract is a result embodying labor-power. As Mr. Spargo well says: Labor-power is a commodity and wages is its price.'

"Labor being a commodity, it is subservient to the conditions that govern its sister commodities. There is, however, one point wherein labor-power differs from other commodities: it must constantly be renewed. The worker, unlike such commodities as pig-iron and bricks, but not at all unlike such commodities as sheep and steers, must have tool, clothing and a home in order to make him useful—and at that he must eventually die. And again: whereas other commodities, in raw material form, are as a rule utterly consumed in the creation of Exchange-Values, this labor-power creates fresh values in the course of its work and lives on to create still more."

Herein lies the doctrine of 'The Surplus Value.' The Socialists claim that between the ownership of the tools in the first instance and the use of the tools in the second, something was produced that could be sold for more money—was of more value—than A, the owner, expended. That surplus value, according to the Socialist, was created by B as the user of the tools, rather not by A, the owner of them, and that B should be rewarded for his time and should receive that 'Surplus Value' which he has created.

"This is the root of the essential antagonism that the Socialist discovers between employer and employee. In this creation by the commodity of labor-power of fresh values—surplus values—and in that commodity's power to continue so to create such values so long as the power lives—in that rests the belief that the employer, or capitalist, by getting possession of the surplus value without paying for it, gets something for nothing—something over and above the wages of the worker, and the price of the worker's food, clothing and housing, and over and above the rental of the machine, the wear and tear, and, so getting, perpetuates his power."

So long as it is necessary to order out the state militia to enforce the divine command, "Thou shalt not steal," under the very shroud of smoke hovering over the holocaust in Northern Michigan, the subscriptions for home missions ought to be increasingly liberal. Every discreet investment in religious education which results in enthroning the conscience in mankind saves just so much of investment in state militias and policemen and jails and almshouses and other reformatory institutions later on. It is a stitch-in-time investment of the first magnitude. Society is really no stronger than its weakest link, and we are beginning to believe that the strongest link in business is the golden rule, rather than the iron rule. The employee who will do right because it is right and because he cannot conscientiously do otherwise is the sought-after employee of the honest business man. And, while this class of citizenship is needed in times of peace and times of plenty, it is still more needed in times of stress and listress.

THE WATER QUESTION.

Mr. Holmes has raised the water question in two different phases in a communication printed elsewhere today. We presume that Mr. Holmes is voicing the sentiment of many of our citizens. There seems to be a feeling that the public at large is not apprised of the exact situation with regard to our water supply. The course taken by the water board of peremptorily restricting the use of water when it is most needed seems to be having the effect of creating a suspicion in the minds of the public that we have an utterly inadequate water supply for our actual needs in times of drought.

If we have an adequate supply for all of our legitimate needs, then it would seem that the hours for watering ought to be those which would meet the needs and convenience of the most of our people. Mr. Holmes is not by any means in a class of himself as to the convenience of the evening water hour. It is light enough to use the hose as late as eight o'clock these long summer evenings, and the use from seven to eight would probably be the most profitable hour of the day as far as the reviving of the things sprinkled is concerned.

We have heard it repeatedly urged that we pump enough water to supply a city of five or six times our population. If this is so, then there is a leak somewhere, and very serious leak. The public ought to know, we think, from the board of water commissioners, whether this is so, and what the whole truth of the matter is. It has always seemed to us that as a matter of business, the city ought to require the installation of a meter for every water user and then charge a reasonable rate for the use of water. Then everybody would know that they were paying for just so much water as they used and no more. If we are pumping several times as much water as a city of our size, where they all use meters, would use, then there is evidently a large loss accruing to the city. We know that there are people who will turn on their hose and let it run in the garden perhaps, or somewhere else out of sight, during the darkness all night. Or, in order to insure themselves a cool drink, they leave their faucets going all night somewhere, and it is manifest furthermore that many do not regard the hours set by the board, because they may be seen all over the city sprinkling their lawns and otherwise using the water after eight o'clock in the morning for example and after seven o'clock in the evening and at other prohibited times.

A universal water meter system would automatically adjust the use of water, we are inclined to think. Of course if everybody had meters and for some sufficient reason the amount of water was inadequate to meet the needs of sprinkling and other uses and at the same time protect our city against fire in a very dry time,—then some reasonable regulations would need to be put in force of course. But it would seem that the present restrictions as to use might be made to accommodate the people better.

For example, why should not those who do use the meter have a different rule than those who do not? They pay for every gallon they use, while the other fellow probably doesn't. We believe the meter system universally installed would not cost the consumer any more, if as much, as he now pays. Before we installed a meter we thought that it would cost us less under the flat rate, but, after the installation of the meter, we do not see that it costs us any more and are not sure but that it costs a little less than it did under the flat rate, although we use it as freely under the meter as we did under the flat rate. The meter would stop the waste of water by a natural law.

We would like to see an estimate made of the cost of installing a separate water system for use on our lawns and for sprinkling our streets,—a system that would involve the pumping direct from the river of the water used for these two latter purposes. It would be just as good for the use of sprinkling streets, and it would be very much better for use on our lawns and shrubbery. Such a system would be largely automatic in its operations, because it could be pumped in such quantities as were needed during the dry time and then, when not needed no particular expense would be incurred, except the original expense of laying the extra pipes and conduits to accommodate this system. It is possible of course that the use of this amount of water directly pumped from the river might interfere with the head at the water works dam, but this is a question which we would like to see discussed.

The dust question is a menacing question from the standpoint of the public health, as well as a nuisance and an economic law from the standpoint of keeping the highways in the best of repair. But we doubt the legal right to tax the cottage of a resident living near the city limits in order to run a springling wagon on a street down town which is so much frequented as to cause the dust. Unless the public health were jeopardized, so as to be able to predicate a benefit to this distant resident in the way of protection to his health, it is doubtful in our mind whether taxation for such a purpose can be supported. If it cannot, then perhaps it can be adjusted in some more reputable way. Perhaps the cost of it can be met by taxation upon the property benefited. While this cannot be adjusted on some such basis, because germs which travel in dust, if kept down by the citizens of Adams street, for instance, will benefit, from the standpoint of the public health, quite as much the citizens of Hamilton street who may not pay or desire to have their streets sprinkled. But if we had an estimate made of the cost of the sprinking, so that the people might pass upon it at some future election, they could then see how much they wanted it. Although a majority of people should vote in support of it, it would not legalize it on the basis of taxation, if it were illegal to proceed without such a vote, unles the vote were unanimous.

We doubt whether one sprinkling wagon in each ward would prove very satisfactory. Judging by the amount of sprinkling done by the wagon down town, the citizens find it necessary to sprinkle the streets themselves with the hose quite frequently in order to keep the dust down, although they are paying to have it sprinkled with the sprinkling wagon. And these sprinkling wagons certainly do not cover anything like a single ward. If we had the water to use ad libitum and each citizen would use his hose the streets could be kept wet down in this way probably as cheaply and at a cost which would be as fair as any which could be apportioned amongst those to be benefited. But if we knew the reasonable limit of territory which could be adequately kept sprinkled with a single wagon and the cost of the outfit and the cost of the man to do the sprinkling, then a certain section of the city might find it possible to enter upon an investment on their own behalf for their own comfort and protection, cooperating of course with the city in securing an adequate water supply for this purpose.

This is certainly a timely subject, and we trust our citizens and the water board will take hold of it and thrash it out for the public good.

You ought to be fair as the dawn with your name and I don't blame you for wanting to cure your "muddy" complexion, but don't ask me for a remedy to "take inside" unless you mean the eating of green vegetables. From what you say your liver is probably at fault. Try to increase its action by taking Epsom salts every morning, or, if these do not agree with you, try a small dose of castor oil at night. Eat spinach twice a week or get up early like your namesake and go out and gather dandelion plants and cook them as "greens." There is a great revival of the old fashion of eating them now because of their medicinal properties and they are cultivated in greenhouses for the city markets. They are served as salad on the tables of fashionable hotels. As you live in a small town, you should be able to get them.—Woman's World.

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many an Ypsilanti Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed; to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. To tell how this great change can be brought about will prove comforting words to hundreds of Ypsilanti readers.

John P. Burkheiser, 15 W. Congress St., Ypsilanti, Mich., says: "I had more or less trouble from my back and kidneys for some time and there was often a constant, dull ache across to stoop. That my kidneys were disordered and the cause of my trouble was shown by irregular passages of the kidney secretions. When I chanced to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box at Weinmann-Matthews Co.'s drug store and upon using them as directed received great benefit. This remedy acted as a tonic to my kidneys and made me feel better in every way. There is no question about Doan's Kidney Pills living up to the claims made for them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and the loins that made it difficult for me take no other.

MEDBURY

MOST COMPLETELY RESTRICTED SUBDIVISION IN DETROIT

This beautiful property is located on Woodward avenue, Highland Park, within five minutes' walk of Palmer Park. Mammoth forest trees (oak, elm and maple) scattered over the property add greatly to its beauty. Every street in this tract is high and dry and well restricted. The owners are putting forth every effort to make this subdivision stand out in a class by itself; the real garden spot of this great city. Streets are wide. Houses must be set back at least 20 feet from sidewalk. Can you imagine how beautiful these streets will be? One street is restricted exclusively to bungalows. One street on which you can build single or double houses, or two-family flats. The other streets two-story single residences only.

Maintenance Fund

A separate fund is being set aside which can be used only for the up-keep and beautifying of the streets for a period of five years. We propose to see that the purchasers in this beautiful Medbury Tract are thoroughly protected, whether they buy for investment or immediate home building.

Unequaled as an Investment

In a short time speculators will be tumbling over each other to get the Medbury Tract lots.

In a few years the land that we are now selling for hundreds will bring thousands.

Nothing can check Detroit's growth out Woodward.

Before those who are buying on installments have their lots fully paid for, the property will be covered with beautiful homes, and Detroit will have grown far beyond there, and their lots will have doubled in value before they have finished paying for them.

No one knows as well as we do, how little land, comparatively speaking, is left in the North Woodward district. The supply will soon give out, and in certain localities it is giving out now.

REMEMBER

THE BEST CHANCE, THE BEST PRICE, THE BIGGEST PROFITS, COME TO THOSE WHO DON'T WAIT, BUT WHO LOOK, THINK AND ACT.

PRICES OF LOTS, $375.00 to $750.00, including sidewalk, sewers, water and gas.

VERY EASY TERMS.

HIS NAME MOST APPROPRIATE

"Knapp" It Was and Drowsy Delegate Proceeded to Live Up to Cognomen.

During the morning prior to the opening of the national convention, a special meeting of those delegates already arrived was held to discuss and vote on some preliminary measures. These met in a smaller hall, opposite the convention hall; and when they were all assembled in the stuffy room, one of the members leaned back wearily in his chair and promptly fell asleep.

After an hour's session, the chairman called a vote on a certain measure. All responded but the sleeper, whose snores now and then echoed through the room.

"Here! wake that man up!" demanded the chairman, at this point. "What's his name, anyway?"

No one being able to tell, and no one following the chairman's order to wake the sleeper up, that functionary at once called upon a ballot clerk to carry out the order. So accordingly the clerk hurried down the aisle to the dozer, shook him vigorously by the arm, asking him his name the while.

With a broken snore that perforated the atmosphere, the sleeper awoke.

"What's his name?" again called out the impatient chairman.

At this, the clerk straightened up from the unknown member's chair, and announced, to the accompaniment of a roar of laughter.

"Mr. chairman, he says his name is Knapp."—Judge's Library.

MANY BIG LEAGUE MANAGERS TO GO

Ax To Fall on No Fewer Than Seven This Season.

CLARK GRIFFITH IS IN BAD.

Manager of Cincinnatis Has the Material, but Could Not Make Team Pennant Contender—McAleer to Resign—Tenney to Get the Gate.

The remarkable shifting of managers in the major leagues two and three years ago is likely to be outdone at the end of the present season, when no less than seven skippers of unfortunate second division outfits will be asked to show cause why they should not be supplanted. Disappointed club owners are already beginning to plan on next year's teams, and at least two managers have already made up their minds to resign.

This is Jim McAleer's last season as a major league manager. Although he is drawing a princely salary in Washington and his contract does not expire until after the season of 1912, McAleer is disgusted over affairs in Washington and will get out. The Washington club runs along with no business management or staff of scouts such as other clubs employ, and McAleer consequently finds himself stuck with a team of veterans. He is wealthy and intends to buy a minor league club—in fact, he has already started negotiations.

CLARK GRIFFITH OF CINCINNATI.

Clark Griffith hasn't a chance to stick in Cincinnati the way things are going there. Griff registered a failure with the Reds, although he commands a team of individual stars and has spent much money in the upkeep of his machine. The principal trouble is lack of good pitching, the same as it was when Griff bossed the Yankees. Cincinnati is down on the old fox, the papers are burning up the team every day, and Herrmann is disgusted.

Other managers who may be asked to move are Patsy Donovan of the Boston Americans, Bob Wallace of the St. Louis Browns, George Stovall of Cleveland, Fred Tenney, Boston Nationals, and possibly Bill Dahlen of Brooklyn.

As long as John I. Taylor owns the Red Sox John I. Taylor will be their manager. He may not hold the official title, but he is the boss. Taylor travels with the team, calls down the athletes, picks the pitchers, hands out suspensions and engineers all deals. He has picked to pieces the good team that Fred Lake left him. Donovan shoulders the blame, and Taylor is looking for a new scapegoat. Jimmy Collins, George Huff, Bob Unglaub, Jim McGuire and Fred Lake could not suit Taylor, and neither can Donovan.

In St. Louis it is believed that Bob Wallace will voluntarily resign the management of the Browns, but will remain with the team. Fred Lake will be his successor if there is a change.

Fred Tenney's days in Boston are numbered. It is officially denied, but nevertheless it is a certainty that Johnny Kling has been promised the management of the Rustlers.

Harry Davis has been offered the management of the Cleveland team and probably will accept next winter. George Stovall, the present leader of the Naps, is willing to become a private again. Stovall's appointment to succeed McGuire has never been considered as anything but a temporary arrangement.

Bill Dahlen has had some hard luck in Brooklyn. This is his second year, and if the Dodgers fail to finish higher than seventh Dahlen may be asked to quit.

Cincinnati fans would like to see John Ganzel back there, because they believe that John never was given a show in the year that he worried along with the Reds. Ganzel has won two pennants at Rochester and has an excellent chance to capture a third.

Concerning Frank Chance, Hugh Jennings, John McGraw and Connie Mack, we venture the opinion that they will be found doing business at the same old stands in 1912, no matter who wins the world's championship next fall.

Bargains in Detroit Real Estate.

The tract in Detroit just opened by capitalists of that city, is called the Medbury Tract and is situated on North Woodward avenue. The location is a favorite one, as the situation is elevated and free from the smoke and dust of the central portion of the city. It has all improvements—gas, water and sewers. Any of our readers can secure a lot by forwarding $10 to Hannan's Realty Exchange, McGraw Building, Detroit. If dissatisfied on personal inspection, another lot may be reserved or money will be returned. As this is the last tract on North Woodward within reasonable distance available for subdivision purposes, it behooves all who desire to profit by the investment to act at once. Further particulars will be mailed promptly on request. The proposition is well worth investigating.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Prof. W. H. Pearce will address the S. C. A. at Starkweather Hall on Sunday afternoon. His subject will be "Big Me's."

Miss Estelle Downing received Friday a letter from Miss Jessie Pelps, but from the casual way in which she spoke of the northern fires it is not probable that the camp at Lake Douglass where she is located has been at any time in danger. She simply stated that the fires seemed to be receding.

New Remedy That Removes Freckles or Costs Nothing

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle–Face, to try a new remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles, which if it does give you a clear complexion, the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength, from your druggist and one night's treatment will show you how easy it is to rid yourself forever of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is the only prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.
